I am joining the Society for Conservation Biology North America (SCBNA)—part of the global Society for Conservation Biology, which represents nearly 3,000 members across six global regions—in expressing strong opposition to the proposed rescission of the 2001 Roadless Area Conservation Rule. If the Roadless Rule, a cornerstone of American conservation policy protecting some 58.5M acres of national forest land, is repealed, our nation's forests would face devastating and irreversible consequences in its biodiversity, wildfire resilience, long-term ecosystem health.

TAKE ACTION with SCBNA TODAY to write in opposition to the proposed rescission of the 2001 Roadless Area Conservation Rule.

This legislation would bring devastating and irreversible consequences in the biodiversity, wildfire resilience, and long-term ecosystem health of our nation's forests.
